

Bridget Booker serves as President of the U.S. Minority Contractors Association (USMCA) – Central Illinois Chapter and is the founder of Reign Construction LLC, a design-build firm committed to delivering resilient, high-quality projects for churches, community facilities, housing, and public infrastructure. Guided by a vision of opportunity, equity, and generational legacy, Bridget focuses on opening doors for minority, women, and veteran-owned contractors to compete—and win—in federal, state, and municipal markets.

Bridget has led Reign Construction through complex engagements and is driving a comprehensive safety and compliance framework that aligns OSHA standards with practical field execution. She is actively establishing apprenticeship pathways and bid-readiness support so small firms can build capacity, meet documentation requirements, and confidently pursue prime and subcontracting opportunities.

Complementing her construction leadership, Bridget is developing Reign Wear, an innovation effort in safety and workwear—so more can thrive in the trades with dignity and protection. Her broader vision includes education programs that strengthen local economies while protecting intellectual property and brand integrity.

As Chapter President, Bridget partners closely with USMCA's national leadership and members to expand access to training, strategy sessions, and weekly bidding opportunities. She is committed to transparent governance, consistent member engagement, and collaborative relationships with primes, public owners, and community stakeholders. Whether shepherding project deliverables, advocating for fair contracting practices, or mentoring the next generation, Bridget brings disciplined execution and heartfelt purpose to every endeavor—building structures, careers, and legacies that stand the test of time.
